Job Description

Full time, permanent position at the Department of Social and Economic Geography, Institute of Geography and Earth Sciences, Faculty of Sciences, Eotvos Lorand University

Applications are invited for the position of assistant professor to lecture in different courses in social and economic geography and to develop internationally competitive research in the area of human geography. We view this post as a balanced researcher and lecturer position and we expect both high level research and engaged pedagogy with both under- and post-graduate teaching.

Applicants must hold a PhD in geography or a related field. Ample knowledge of cultural geography / urban geography / economic geography is a prerequisite. Experience with research on sustainable development is advantageous. The primary teaching language is Hungarian at our university; therefore, an appropriate knowledge of Hungarian language is required. (Those applicants who do not speak Hungarian must learn the language in two years.)

Along with your application please provide a personal statement, curriculum vitae, copies of relevant certificates and documents, and a description of scientific publications. Please send your application via e-mail as PDF attachments to Dr Robert Gyori (gyorirobert@caesar.elte.hu).

After revising the submitted applications, possible candidate(s) will be contacted for further information to submit.
