Tripping on Modernist Monuments

The girlscanscan collective was founded in 2021 within the Student Architecture Studio of the Technical University Budapest. As the architectural heritage of the 20th century is disappearing in Budapest through demolitions, we asked ourselves how the actors—as we call them, the rescue teams—are trying to save this heritage and what is the toolkit they work with. After scanning the Hungarian situation and presenting it at a docomomo conference in Kharkiv, Ukraine, we decided to travel abroad to look for good practices. Instead of traveling West, we headed East, and started our research project, Tripping on Modernist Monuments: Thanks to the i-Portunus Grant we visited the rescue teams in Ukraine, Moldova and Romania. During the CATference you have the possibility to have an overview on our work, as we present our approach and the current discussions—in the form of case studies—regarding the modern heritage in the form of a small exhibition. We, Bíborka Bánszegi, Júlia Bakucz, Lilla Varga and Lilla Kammermann invite you to read the stories, we encountered throughout our trip in September 2021. We are curious about your comments and opinion, please contact us via hello@girlscanscan.com
